Arabs' Camps near Fez. Nothing more picturesque can be imagined than an Arab Camp on the plains. The colouring in Morocco is gorgeous and constantly changing—the sands of the desert seeming to catch the sun's rays and reflect them in myriads of colours. Fez itself is one of the most interesting of Moorish cities, but is seldom visited by the ordinary tourist, as it necessitates a fairly long journey on mules or horseback from Tangier or Marrakesh. It is one of the three capitals of the Moorish empire, and has a population of 120,000.
